EVERYWHERE JACKET // HOW IT'S MADE:

- * Spiritex Fabrics specializes in domestically produced, Organic Cotton and hemp. They spin, knit, and finish their organic cotton knits in family-owned mills within 120 miles of their Asheville, NC headquarters. They source fibre from the Texas Organic Growers Marketing Co-op, which they purchased in 1993.
- * Their goods meet Global Organic Textile Standard (GOTS), the worldwide leading textile processing standard for organic fibres backed up by independent certification of the entire textile supply chain. It defines world-wide recognized requirements from harvesting of the raw materials, through environmentally and socially responsible manufacturing, to labeling in order to provide credible assurance to the end consumer.
- * Vibrant colors are achieved using a Low-impact, Fibre-reactive Dyeing process. Low-impact dyes have been classified by Oeko-Tex® Standard 100 as eco-friendly. Generally, low impact dyes do not contain toxic chemicals or mordants (which fix the dye to the fabric), require less rinsing, and have a high absorption rate, at least 70% in the fabric, creating less water runoff than conventional dyeing processes.
- * Oeko-Tex is an independent testing and certification system for harmful substances including: illegal substances, legally regulated substances, known harmful (but not not legally regulated) chemicals, and parameters for health care. In their entirety, these requirements clearly exceed existing national legislation.
- * Ethical manufacturing. Fair Trade aims to combat widespread poverty by providing opportunity for economically disadvantaged producers, cultivating transparent trade partnerships, ensuring safe working conditions and the rights of women and children, and focusing on environmental sustainability through all stages of production. *Fibre Athletics is a Chicago Fair Trade business member.
